

Static projection does not separate the seven training arms

The last-token residual follows a similar projection curve in every arm, including the suppressed arms 4 and 6. This readout cannot tell us whether suppression is reversible, which is why the causal steering test matters.

